Overview

The Information Security Registered Assessors Program (IRAP) is an Australian Government initiative managed by the Australian Cyber Security Centre (ACSC). IRAP provides a comprehensive framework for assessing the security of information and communications technology (ICT) systems, ensuring they meet the stringent security requirements necessary for handling government data and operating critical infrastructure.

QuantSec has successfully completed an IRAP assessment, demonstrating our commitment to the highest tier of security protocols required by the Australian Government. This assessment validates our security posture and confirms our capability to protect sensitive information and critical systems in accordance with government-grade security standards.

Key Capabilities

Our IRAP assessment validates the following security capabilities:

- Australian Government-recognized security assessment: Independent verification of our security controls by ACSC-approved assessors, ensuring compliance with government security requirements

- Validates highest-tier security protocols: Comprehensive evaluation of our security posture against the most stringent Australian Government security standards

- Critical infrastructure protection standards: Demonstrated capability to protect systems that are vital to national security and essential services

- Government-grade security compliance: Full alignment with security controls required for handling classified and sensitive government information

Significance for Clients

IRAP assessment represents one of the most rigorous security evaluations available in Australia. By achieving this assessment, QuantSec demonstrates our ability to provide security services that meet or exceed government requirements. This is particularly valuable for clients in regulated industries, critical infrastructure sectors, and organizations that require assurance of the highest security standards.

The IRAP framework encompasses comprehensive security controls across people, processes, and technology, including physical security, personnel security, ICT security, and information security. Our successful assessment confirms that we maintain robust security practices across all these domains, providing our clients with confidence that their sensitive information and critical systems are protected to government-grade standards.
